

Caring

Dear Caring One,

I do care for you today – both affectionately and watchfully. Won't you cast all of your cares upon me and let me bear those burdens that weigh you down and rob you of your joy?

As man's first assignment was to 'dress and keep the garden,' so mine is to care for you – and yours is to care for others. It's a choice – a two-way street which holds no guarantee that the recipient of the care will respond in kind.

But I promise to show you "I care" in a multitude of ways every day. Look for them, be blessed by them and pass them on!

I yearn for you to enjoy the abundance I came to bring in your garden of life. I've ordained for you to bear fruit that will last. Will you trust me in this? You won't be disappointed if you do.

Affectionately yours,

Jesus
